The background of the study

The background of the study establishes the context of the research. This section explains why this particular research topic is important and essential to understanding the main aspects of the study. Usually, the background forms the first section of a research article/thesis and justifies the need for conducting the study and summarizes what the study aims to achieve.

How to structure the background

In this section, the author usually outlines the historical developments in the literature that led to the current topic of research concisely. If the study is interdisciplinary, it should describe how different disciplines are connected and what aspects of each discipline will be studied.

Additionally, authors should briefly highlight the main developments of their research topic and identify the main gaps that need to be addressed. In other words, this section should give an overview of your study. The section should be organized as:

What is known about the broad topic?

What are the gaps or missing links that need to be addressed?

What is the significance of addressing those gaps?

What are the rationale and hypothesis of your study?

The background section, therefore, should provide general information about the topic of your research and emphasize the main aims of the study. Please ensure that you only discuss the main and relevant aspects of the studies that have led to your aims. Do not elaborate on them as this should be done in the literature review section. The background section should discuss your findings in a chronological manner to accentuate the progress in the field and the missing points that need to be addressed. The background should be written as a summary of your interpretation of previous research and what your study proposes to accomplish.

How is the background different from the literature review

Study background	Literature review
Should be the first section of the study	Should be the section that follows the background of the study
Should provide the context of the study	Should provide a comprehensive overview of broad and specific literature in the field
Should provide a historical perspective and highlight the significance of the study	Should critically highlight the progress of research and gaps that need to be addressed
Should not elaborate on background literature and only summarize it	Should provide a detailed review of the existing literature on the topic
